

REL 436 : Special Topics in Biblical Studies

This course, with rotating topics, is an analysis of the form, content and meaning of a specific biblical book or doctrine over against its philosophical and historical background. The instructor, according to research interest or the need of students, chooses a specific book or perspective. The course can be taken more than once for credit when different books or doctrines are offered. Offered as needed.

Credits 3